Sammy Saves Easter

Jonathan Leeming

In the African savannah, a magical land,
Lived Sammy, a scorpion, so handsome and grand.
With pincers wide and a heart so true,
He dreamt of Easter joy, that much was due.

One fine day, the Easter Bunny fell ill,
Easter's joy seemed quiet and still.
Sammy, with courage, came forth with glee,
"I'll help you out, just wait and see!"

His armour gleamed, in the morning light,
Sammy embarked on his Easter flight.
With a basket of eggs, so bright and bold,
He scuttled along, his story to unfold.

"My fellow creatures," Sammy would say,
"I'm here to bring Easter joy in my own special way."
The animals gasped, "A scorpion so rare,
But if he's with the Bunny, we have no need to fear!"

Through savannah so green and forests deep,
Sammy's journey, a promise to keep.
He met a wise owl, perched in a tree
Guiding with wisdom, helping him see.

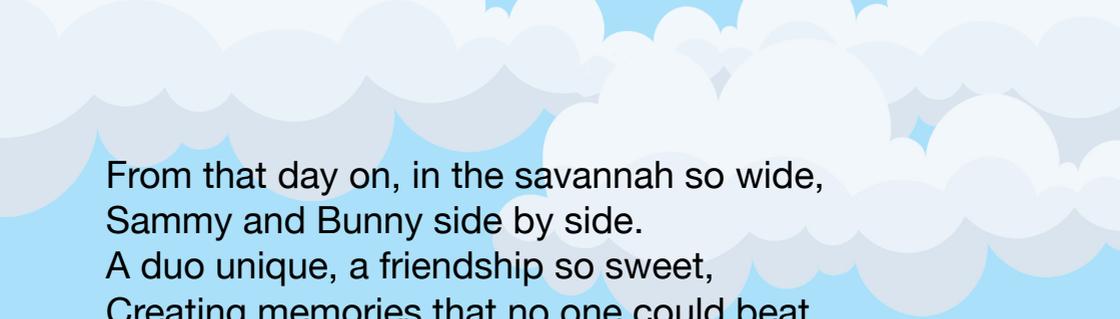

A spring hare leapt by, so swift and spry,
“Let me help you, Sammy, reach for the sky!”
Together they journeyed, a duo so sweet,
Spreading Easter magic with every fleet feat.

In the woods, a bush baby, with a bushy tail,
Joined the adventure, without a fail.
They hung eggs on branches, high and low,
Creating a spectacle, a magical show.

As the sun dipped low, painting the sky,
Sammy and friends felt joy multiply.
The Easter Bunny, now well and spry,
Peeked from the burrow, a tear in his eye.

“Sammy, my hero, you’ve done it so well,
You’ve woven a tale that all will tell.
With courage and kindness, you’ve shown the way,
Easter’s joy is here to stay!”

The animals cheered, a harmonious sound,
Echoing through the savannah, spreading around.
Sammy, the scorpion, an unlikely star,
Brought Easter joy and magic near and far.

From that day on, in the savannah so wide,
Sammy and Bunny side by side.
A duo unique, a friendship so sweet,
Creating memories that no one could beat.

So, in the land where dreams come true,
The tale of Sammy, forever grew.
Of Easter joy and a scorpion's cheer
A story to cherish, year after year.
